Labor leadership candidate MK Ehud Barak (right) confers with competitor MK Yossi Beilin at the party convention yesterday, where Barak's proposal for closed primaries was adopted.

LABOR leadership candidate MK Ehud Barak emerged victorious yesterday from the party convention, which adopted his proposal for "closed primaries," which could pave his way.

to the party leadership.

MK Haim Rangon, who decided not to run for the party leadership after his proposal for "open primaries" was rejected, declared after the meeting that he would support whoever is elected Labor leader, but in the race for the party leadership he supports MK Yossi Beilin. In a restrained, "statesmanlike" speech, Barak called on the delegates to adopt closed primaries - for party members only - to elect the party's new leader and candidate for prime

"I asked myself, what is the right way? How was the late Yitzhak Rabin, who led us to victory for the first time in 20 years, elected? By closed primaries.

Talks with hundreds of party members made it clear to me that we must not weaken the party, especially in view of the direct elections for prime minister. Don't take away the party members' power to determine our candidate for chairman and prime minister by transferring this power to anyone in the street," Barak said. He won stormy applause from the delegates when he urged them to abandon "the tendency to bash each other and tear candidates' legs and arms off. We'll only be able to persuade the public that we are attentive and open to all its sectors if we practice this at home. Only when we form a team and a captain who convey freedom of thought, pluralism and unity in action can we ask the public to give us its confidence in the elections in the year 2,000, and preferably earlier."

The drama in the convention was provided by Ramon, who spoke last. Ramon, whose address was purictured by frequent catcalls and "boos," gave a charismenic speech, as was (Continued on Page 9)

Netanyahu's remarks came a day after a fivehour meeting between Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat and Ross failed to bridge gaps. Soldier killed, eight wounded in Lebanon

AN IDF soldier was killed and eight others were wounded yesterday in fierce fighting in south Lebanon, as at least one Karyusha rocket fell in Western Galilee.

There were no casualties or damage in the rocket attack, which was the second - following a similar incident last month - since the Operation Grapes of Wrath ceasefire last April.

IAF warplanes struck at Hizbullah targets north of the security zone shortly after the Karyusha exploded harmlessly in open land in the Western Galilee.

The IDF Spokesman said the planes hit terrorist targets in the Jabal Rafiah area. The spokesman said the pilots reported accurate hits, and all the planes returned safely.

Hizbullah denied being involved in the rocket attack, but did claim responsibility for the evening clash in the central sector of the zone, in which the IDF soldier was killed and five of his comrades were wounded. The Amal movement later claimed responsibility for the Katyusha anack.

Earlier, at around 6 a.m., three soldiers from the elite Egoz unit were wounded when one of them stepped on and detonated a mine near Soujud in the northeastern sector of the zone. It was not clear whether the anti-personnel mine had been planted recently or was an old one.

The soldier who stepped on the mine lost a foot in the incident and his two comrades were lightly hurt. They were all treated in the field and evacuated by helicopter to Haifa's Ramban Hospital. Dr. Zvi Ben-Isbai. deputy hospital director, said the moderately wounded soldier had undergone emergency surgery after losing his foot and his condition was fair.

One of the lightly wounded soldiers was released after treatment. The other was kept in the hospital but was expected to be allowed released soon.

The mine incident sparked heavy exchanges in the region, with IDF and South Lebanese Array gunners blasting Hizbullah targets north of the zone. Reports from Lebanon said IAF helicopter gunships also participated.

Hizbullah's fighting arm, the Islamic Resistance, fired mortars at IDF troops in the eastern sector and at an SLA post near Jezzine. There were no casualties.

Later, in the early evening, troops on patrol in the Shornriya region came under fire from Hizbullah gunmen. During the close-range clash one of the soldiers was killed and five others were wounded.

The soldiers, who were on ambush duty between Almane and Deir Sirman in the central sector, spotted the Hizbullah squad of four gunmen and opened fire. It was not clear whether all four were killed or wounded in the exchange. IDF gunners pounded Hizbullah targets north of the zone in exchanges that continued for several hours, with Hizbullah gunmen also shelling another IDF position in the Kawkabeh area, north of Marjayoun, in the eastern sector.

The five wounded in the firefight were all evacuated to Haifa's Rambam Hospital, suffering from bullet wounds mainly in the arms and legs.

Hospital director Dr. Moshe Revah said four were in satisfactory condition and would undergo surgery during the night. One was lightly burt.

They are all in stable condition and we expect them to make full recoveries without any complications," Revah said.

The Katyusha rocket attack occurred just before 6:45 p.m. when residents of a Western Galilee village reported explo-

Levine warns Hizbullah

DAVID RUDGE

OC Northern Command Maj.-Gen. Amiram Levine yesterday issued a stern warning to Hizbullah that it is "walking a nightrope" and risks a heavy IDF response to its recent escalation in hostilities.

Levine told reporters at Northern Command beadquarters the organization was hiding behind the Grapes of Wrath understandings and firing from the outskirts and sometimes inside villages in the belief that the IDF would not return fire for fear of endangering civilians.

He stressed, however, that the understandings gave the IDF the right to return fire in self-defense. Levine said there was a limit to the IDF's restraint and it might prove necessary to hit back harder to cease the firing and prevent casualties. In such circumstances, Hizbullah would be solely responsible for bringing the fighting into the villages.

ately launched searches in the area which revealed that at least one Katyusha rocket had fallen on open ground not far from the village. There were no injuries or damage.

Reports from Lebanon said one or two rockets had been launched from open space north of the security zone and some distance east of Kleileh village, itself about 7 kilometers south of Tyre.

Kleileh is known to be controlled by Hizbullah and there was considerable Katyusha rocket firing from around that area during Operation Grapes of Wrath.

It was from the outskirts of Kleileh that the previous rocket attack was launched on December 13, which also failed to cause any injuries or damage. That was the first attack since the end of Operation Grapes of Wrath.

According to reports from Lebanon, however, the position of the firing yesterday evening was much farther from the village than on the previous occasion.

The IDF blamed Palestinian groups, probably Ahmed Jibril's PFLP-General Command for the December attack, although reports from Lebanon indicated the possibility that it was carried out by local Hizbullah activists, despite the organization's denial at the

Meanwhile, the committee monitoring the Grapes of Wrath understandings yesterday completed its deliberations into complaints by Israel and Lebanon with a plea to all the sides in the conflict to respect and uphold the understandings that ended the cross-border hening last Al According to Spokesman, the committee acknowledged that Hizbullah gunmen twice violated the understandings in recent weeks.

Yesterday's fighting followed heavy exchanges and clashes in the zone, particularly in the Soujud region, for over a week.

The IDF lodged a complaint with the committee over yesterday's Katyusha attack.

Military sources noted that the escalation in Hizbullah's activities had followed almost immediately Syria's accusations that Israel was responsible for the bus bombing in Damascus last Tuesday in which 13 people were killed and over 40 were wounded. Israel categorically denied the allegations.

The fighting eased last night after the IAF strike and was replaced by a tense quiet with IDF and SLA troops remaining on full alert inside the zone and along the northern border.

No instructions were given to residents to go into bomb shelters, although some said they would be sleeping in security rooms as a

IDF using soldiers as guinea pigs in nerve gas antidote experiments

THE IDF admitted yesterday that it has been testing a nerve gas antidote and other drugs on soldiers for decades, but dismissed charges that soldiers are forced to participate in the experiments.

Army Surgeon General Brig-Gen. Yehoshua Shemer said recruits today are being used in medical experiments, but only on a voluntary basis and soldiers must sign a waiver to participate. "There are no secrets here," Shemer said, adding that the drug-being tested was Pirsiglobin. "It protects against the very grave effects of nerve gas. If you take it. before being exposed it neutralizes most of the serious effects of nerve gas." Mordechai, Levy assure world Israel not warmongering

ARIEH O'SULLIVAN and LIAT COLLINS

Syria, Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai told his American and British counterparts in recent telephone calls, defense officials said.

Mordechai telephoned both US Secretary of Defense William Perry and Britain's Defense Secretary Michael Portillo and told them that Israel does not intend to execute any attack on Syria and that the government of Israel expects the peace negotiations with Damascus to resume, officials said yesterda Mordechai also updated Perry and Portillo on the Hebron negotiations with the Palestinians and "exchanged with them assessments" on the situation in the Middle East, officials said. He also updated them on his recent visit to Egypt, including his unprecedented talks with his Egyptian counterpart Mohammed Hussem Tantawi.

Foreign Minister David Levy echoed this message yesterday, telling the Knesset plenum that the government is taking diplomatic and political steps to renew talks with Syria, but said he cannot claborate on what they are. Levy was answering a parliamentary question by MK Azmi Bashara (Hadasb).

"It is the diplomatic aim of the government to attain peace agreements with all our neighbors - including Syria," Levy

"We hope that the negotiations will be resumed soon and are acting to this end.

The government is taking diplomatic and political steps, which I cannot specify in public, to reach this aim of resuming the talks. The government is obliged hy international agreements on which Israel is signed. There are no such agreements yet - with Syria. Before the negotiations with Syria are opened in practice, no pub-ilc declarations should be made on any of the issues," Levy said.

Bashara also asked about the recent statements by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who spoke of some kind of agreement with the previous government over Israeli preparedness to leave the Golan Heights.

"Do you relate to what the Egyptian president said as an agreement with the Israeli government or do not not see the commitment he recalled by the late the case," Levy said.

Golan, as an agreement between Israel and Syria?" Bashara asked.

"The new government announced it will honor written agreements. There is no written agreement [in this case]. From here, I would like to say that the most effective route to the treasured peace serves both sides - I believe in that - it is for each side to raise its opinion around the negotiating table. I hope this will be

Alon Shvut youth confined to his settlement

OC Central Command Maj.-Gen. Uzi Dayan issued an administrative order yesterday restricting the movement of a 17-year-old Alon Shout youth to his settlement for a month for security reasons.

Another administrative order was issued against a Kiryat Arba man, preventing him from entering the territories for a month.

New building to begin today in Hebron's Avraham Avinu quarter

HEBRON'S Jews are scheduled today to begin pouring the foundations of a new residential building in the settlement's Avraham Avinu quarter, settle-ment spokesman David Wilder said yesterday. The significance of the construction, Wilder said, "is it shows that developing the community and bringing in more people, regardless of the plans of Arafat or the Palestinian Authority."

Wilder said that the settlement has all the permits needed to begin construction of the building, which will house 10 apartments and be named after Nahum Hoss and Yehuda Partush, residents of HERB KEINON

Hehron and Kiryat Arba who were killed in a terrorist attack just outside Hebron two years ago. Wilder, said the settlement has had permits to begin building "for some.

However, a spokesman for Minister Yitzbak Mordechai, the minister who most approve all new building in the territories, said he does not know of any permit for construction of a new structure in Avraham Avinu. Wilder said that money to build the structure is coming from donations from here and abroad. The apartments will be owned by the settlement and rented out, as are almost all the properties in the settlement. "We will have no problem filling the apartments." Wilder said.

The plot of land where this building is to go up is one of five Jewish-owned plots in that part of Hebron due to remain under

Peace Now, meanwhile, called on Mordechai to prevent the settlers from pouring the foundations for the huilding. "Every child knows that the timing is not coincidental, and that the intention is to complicate matters before signing the Hebron agreement," Peace Now spokesman Alon Arnon said.

THREE people from the same family were killed and a total of five others were injured in a hitand-run accident in the North yesterday, in a black day on the country's roads.

Those killed were two children, a baby girl, Saha, one, and her seven-year-old brother, Mokhsen, and their mother, Nowal Hamudi, 34. Her busband, and another daughter, Amal, 13, were moderately hurt and a son, Walid, 14, was critically mined.

Two other people in another vehicle which was involved in the accident escaped with light mjuries.

The driver of a red commercial van, which was allegedly responsible for causing the accident. drove away from the scene even though the vehicle was badly damaged from crashing into the two other cars.

The collision itself occurred on the main Rosh Pinna-Kiryat Shmona road near the turn off for Yesod Hama'ala. According to police and eyewitnesses at the scene, the commercial van was travelling south from the direction of Kiryat Shmona and passed two other vehicles, a car and a GMC van, in front. The car with the family inside was travelling in the opposite direction as the van passed the two other cars. The van caught the side of the GMC it was overtaking and, apparently as a result of this collision, the two vehicles crashed directly into the car with the family aboard.

Police sealed off the highway and a helicopter was brought in to help search for the van and its driver, as MDA paramedics and emergency crews tended to the dead and injured.

The runaway driver, aged 25, a resident of nearby Tuba village. was eventually tracked down by a senior officer from the Rosh Pinna police station.

Jews, Arabs vie for land in anticipation

WHILE Israeli and Palestinian negotiators are holding discus-sions in hotel rooms, Jews and Palestinians are vying for various parcels of land in the territories, attempting to stake a claim before the next stage of redeployment.

Yesterday a dispute emerged on a 2,000-dunam plot in the Jordan Valley, between the settlements of Bekaot and Roi. When a few residents of Bekaot went to till the fields, they were confronted by a group of Palestinians who said the land is theirs. The police intervened, and the Israelis agreed to hold off working the land until Sunday, giving the Palestinians a chance to prove their claim to the property.

Jordan Valley Settlement Committee spokeswoman Tami Atiya said that a Tel Aviv lawyer bought the land 18 months ago from a Palestinian, and is leasing it to the two Jordan Valley moshavim. The Palestinians, on the other hand, claim that the land is theirs. Meanwhile, the head of the settlement committee, David Elbayani, filed a complaint with the Ma'aleb Efraim police yester-day, claiming that the Palestinians planted on about a fourth of this plot Yesterday was the first time this season the Bekaot farmers went to work the field. Atiya said that the Palestinians are carefully monitoring every time Jews go to work on any new field in the area. She claimed the Palestinians are trying to create "provocations," so that these areas of dispute can be used as leverage negotiations with Israel. This is the second land dispute in the Jordan Valley in a month, the nther being on the so-called Yugoslav Experimental Farm near Mosbay Mastra. Israel claims that the 400-dunam plot belongs to the moshav, while the Palestinians maintain that, according to the Oslo accords, the land belongs to them.

In a related development, the Council of Jewish Communities in Judea, Samaria and Gaza launched a campaign this week to draw attention to what it says are scores of illegal buildings Palestinians are constructing throughout the territories now controlled by Israel, in an attempt to claim these areas and ensure they come under Palestinian jurisdiction following the next redeployment stage.

Burg: Delamuraz must retract remarks

JEWISH Agency Chairman Avraham Burg, who yesterday held consultations with Jewish leaders in Paris, said last night the negotiations with the Swiss over dormant bank accounts could not resume until former Swiss president Jean-Pascal Delamuraz retracted his remarks about Jewish organizations.

Burg demanded that the entire federal council, Switzerland's cabinet, condemn Delamuraz's remark that demands for a compensation fund for Holocaust victims were "extortion and black-

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister David Levy told the Knesset plenum yesterday that Switzerland is trying to hide its collaboration with the Nazis. The fact that the Swiss parliament decided to reveal secret documents indicates conscience pangs or fear of history's judgement, he said.

He called on Delamuraz to unequivocally take back" his charge of blackmail. "We have oo argument with the Swiss people. We are concerned with one thing: discovering the truth of the biggest

Levy warned against a boycott of Swiss banks which he said could destroy relations with Switzerland and noted that there was almost no European country that did not take part in "the evil crime."

As the mutual recriminations between the two sides continued, Burg released another strongly worded statement yesterday.

"I have the strong suspicion that the Swiss government... is acting hypocritically and again misleading world public opinion," Burg said. "If the Swiss government's intections were honorable," he continued, "it would declare that it was opening up to the general public all information on the accounts which were stolen from the Holocaust victims, Jewish and non-Jewish alike." The Swiss Embassy in Israel yesterday released the text of the federal council's statement from the council's intention to shed all the light, without any restriction whatsoever, on the attitude of the Swiss authorities before, during and after World War II. Along with parliament, it launched a comprehensive process. The aim of this process is to search out the truth."

BUSINESSMAN Mordechai Meir died yesterday at the age of Lodzia Managing-Director Yair Rotlevy described Meir, whom he met in the '50s when he was managing the Export Bank that Meir and his brothers had founded, as "an energetic businessman" and "a fair banker" who had "a vast Meir also built Kolbo Shalom into the country's first major store, Rotlevy said. The store was located in the brothers' Tel Aviv's Shalom Tower, which they had named after their father.

Other projects Meir and his brothers Binyamin and Moshe were involved in included building the Tel Shalom neighborhood.

Car insurance bill ignites Knesset exchange over large families

ARE large families a blessing or a burden? The question popped up in the Knesset plenum yesterday dur-ing a debate on a bill which would make premiums paid by large families on a commercial vehicle used as the family car similar to those paid on private vehicles.

The bill was proposed by MK Hanan Poraz (National Religious Party), father of 11, and soundly condemned by MK Avraham Poraz (Shinui), father of two, it passed preliminary reading 23 to one. The debate grew heated when Poraz declared that very large families are a burden on the State and not good for the children themselves. The most frequent phrase in the heckling from teligious and traditional MKs was "shame on you," and the second most frequent was "bli ayin hara," a prayer to keep away the evil eye, which was uttered antomatically every time anyone mentioned how many children they had. Poraz stressed he was talking of contraceptive methods.

the particularly large families, and said that the bill would mean those traveling in small family cars would be subsidizing those who choose to have more children. "We're talking about insurance and in insurance there are risks," Pocaz said.

There is a limit to the desirable number of children in a family. A family can't have an infinite number of children. It's not good for the family, it's not good for the children, and it's not good for the gencral public," Poraz said. He sug-gested using a phrase other than "blessed with children" to describe families with many offspring.

Porat described the joy of a large family - his includes one adopted child - and called Poraz's state-"anti-Jewish." Porat jumped to conclusions when Poraz mentioned "methods" of keeping families small but it named out the secular MK was advocating decreased child benefits for the sixth child, and not

The decision was announced in a Justice Ministry statement read on state television. Annulments of opposition victories in Nis, Belgrade and 12 other municipalines sparked the mass protests against Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic that went into their 51st

A court in the small central town of Lapovo ruled in favor of the opposition coalition Tuesday, giving it back three seats and control of the town council it had won in the November 17 vote.

A similar appeal occurred over Nis, a former industrial powerhouse and bastion of support for Milosevic. The city, however, has fallen on hard times since Milosevic bankrolled wars in Croatia and Bosnia and Serbia suffered economic sanctions as a result,

DUSAN STOJANOVIC BELGRADE

International fact-finders last month confirmed opposition victories in Nis, Belgrade and the 12 other municipalities. But Milosevie had refused to concede defeat, causing the biggest protests against him since be came to power in 1987.

The real prize is still the capital, Belgrade. Milosevic has adamantly refused to concede opposition victory there.

Control of Nis would enable the opposition to dent the president's strong grip on media outside Belgrade. The opposition has said it wants to start television stations and other independent media there that could reach out through southern Serbia.

Both Milosevie and the opposition want to bolster their standing ahead of Serbian presidential and parliamentary elections scheduled

In Belgrade yesterday, riot police blocked downtown traffic to prevent opposition leaders and their supporters from driving their cars and snarling streets in another protest

Since riot police have prevented marches for two weeks, opposition leaders have come up with alternative ways to continue the protest using Orthodox Christmas processions, a funeral and traffic gridlocks.

Tens of thousands of heavily armed riot police bave been deployed in Belgrade, charged with trying keep the traffic moving during the marching protests. But yesterday they also stopped the traffic.

"It's unbelievable," said opposition leader Vuk Draskovic, as his car was blocked by a police cordon in downtown Belgrade. They should be regulating traffic and not preventing it," said Draskovic, as hundreds of other born-blowing cars remained stranded. The standoff caused a complete traffie jam in downtown Belgrade, with drivers leaving their cars and booing and jeering at police. (AP)

Wheeler said security was under

Security sources suspect that the IRA probably used a homemade horizontally launched mortar bomb or a land mine in the Londonderry attack.

Peru, Japan blame journalists in hostage stalemate

LIMA (Reuter) - Peru and Japan turned their wrath on journalists yesterday for jeopardizing efforts to end the deadlocked hostage crisis, now in its fourth week with Marxist rebels still bolding 74 hostages.

At the center of the controversy were a reporter and a translator working for Japanese television station TV Asahi, who sneaked past police on Tuesday for a two-hour meeting with Tupae Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA) rebels.

Peruvian anti-terrorism police detained the pair and confiscated their notebooks and cameras as they came out of the besieged Japanese ambassador's residence. They would be held for at least five days at the anti-terrorism headquarters in downtown Lima while authorities decide whether to press charges against them, police sources said yesterday, Japan's Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto, speaking on a tour of southeast Asian nations, criticized the reporter, saying he could have harmed efforts to solve the crisis. "It is very regrettable," a Foreign Ministry official quoted Hashimoto as saying. "An act like that could create unforesceable circumstances and disrupt the Peruvian government's efforts for a peaceful resolution and the release of all hostages."

TV Asahi named the two as Peruvian interpreter Victor Borja and New York-based reporter Tsuyoshi Hitomi. The Japanese government's task force in Lima banned them from their daily briefings.

The pair's entry into the residence, as well as the entry on New Year's Eve by a larger group of journalists, was also condemned by Peruvian Prime Minister Alberto Pandolfi as "damaging to the seriousness and fluidity of on July 17. Most of its wreckage has been recovered from the ocean bottom off Long Island. Board officials said the cockpit tape recorder picked up a comment by the pilot just before the crash that he would begin cross-feeding. but if was not known if he actually did. The tests would replicate the movement of fuel from a wing fuel tank through piping to the center tank to assess the effect of mixing fuel and vapors and see how the combination might cause a temperature rise, the officials said. Last month the board recommended that the Federal Aviation Administration order plane-makers to take steps to assure that fuelair mixtures do not reach flash point temperatures. Their recommendations included insulating fuel tanks from outside heat sources and installing gauges to monitor fuel tank temperatures. The FAA said it was studying the recommendations and would take action as warranted.

demanded that soldiers be tested in pressure situations and that recruits presented the best suitable group. He said medical checks were done two months after the experiments to determine if there were any side effects, but none were found.

"We are six years after the Guif War. At that time, when we did not have solutions to the threat [of chemical attack) we were very severely criticized. It is important for the public to know that we continue to increase our capability to present a package of protecnon that not only protects, but also neutralizes" the threat, Shemer told Army Radio.

He said that soldiers had the right to refuse to participate and that 30 percent had chosen not to be part of the latest experiment.

But some participants said those who volunteered for the experiments were absolved from guard duties and were not bothered by the base sergeant major, which was a form of payment. Following the initial report, dozens of people telephoned the radio station saying they too had been subjected to the experiments and that any trace of the research had disappeared since it was not noted in their medical file.

"A recruit in basic training doesn't have real freedom. He wants to be OK with his commander and he is also under strong peer pressure," Lubotsky said. There's a lot of competition to get into Givati. They are very gung-ho. They are so highly motivated that they always want to make the best possible impression," Lubotsky said.

Liat Collins adds: Lubotsky stressed yesterday that despite his criticism of the IDF, the situation in the 1990s is entirely different than in the past. He also reminded the public that the experiments are carried out with the authorization of the Helsinki Committee. He also condemned the lack of medical records pertaining to the experiments in the soldiers' personal files. He called for new regulations to be set by the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee, which would be relevant specifically to military personnel and would operate alongside the Helsinki Committee recommendations.

Canned fragrance, reminiscent of a luxury coffin, somehow falls in line with Ganitier's iconoclastic view of the world.

Some truth in advertising

irst Gauttier came our with canned fragrance – a dooble gimmick featuring a dressmaker's dummy bottle inside a can. Now, he's got a can within a can, without a dressmaker's dummy in the miniature spray version. The latter comes in a red plush setting, somewhat reminiscent of a luxury coffin, which somehow falls in line with Gaultier's iconoclastic view of the world

Also in the can is Faconnable's Face a Face pour Femme to complement Face a Face pour Homme. The packaging gimmick is oot nearly as effective as Gaultier's since he chose a can of the type used for food preserves, whereas Faconnable's metal container is of the kind used for talcum powder in the pre-plastic

The Ean de Toilette in the spillproof spray bottle is really too mannish for a woman's fragrance and smells more like aftershave. This may be attributable to the essence of coriander leaf in the top note. Still, for some women, this may be its very appeal.

CURIOSITY doesn't always kill the cat. Sometimes it even leads, to pleasant discoveries. Where would cosmetics companies be if trying new products?

Women's lobby gets on track

Two issues steadily entering consumer consciousness in this country are the environment and public transportation. Next week, the Council of Women's Organizations in Israel is launching an innovative campaign to create a cleaner, more user-friendly environment by lobbying for the revamping of our entire transportation infrastruc-

The goal of the campaign is to arouse popular awareness of the need for mass public systems of transportation, and of their benefits. Convenient access to trains and buses not only would greatly reduce the "Oy-where-am-Igoing-to-find parking" headaches "getting-stuck-in-traffic" ulcers, but would also enhance the quality of life in many other ways. Among these are: a reduction of air and noise pollution; reduction in traffic accidents; preservation of open landscape; and saving of a lot of commuting time. Two upcoming events sponsored by women's organizations such as Na'amat, Hadassah, and the Academic Women's Union, will set the wheels of this "lobby" in motion. The first, to take place on January 14, is a round-trip "women's train" ride from Haifa to Tel Aviv. Courtesy of Israel Railroad, the train and the trek will be "manned" exclusively by women, and decorated to the hilt with signs, balloons, and insignia of the various organizations participating in the effort. The train will stop along the way to pick up additional passengers and to be met by local mayors and youth transportation and the enviroument. (Opening remarks will be given by the Transport Minister Yitzhak Levy Environment Minister Rapitael Ettan, and Tel Aviv Mayor Roani Milo.)

According to steering committee member Tzippi Berkovitch of Na'amat "Our goal is to change budget priorities by 1998, to enable massive construction of additional train tracks in this country. Currently, Israel Railroad has an extremely limited allotment, as the government invests far more in roads." This, says Berkovitch, is in the interest more of the treasury than of the public welfare. "The more roads, the more cars," she explains, "and the more cars, the more taxes collected on cars." Berkovitch also points out the absurdity of having a huge new cross-country highway, without having a cross-country traio. Furthermore, the trains we do have are too slow. "It's absurd for it to take longer to get from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem by train than by bus - including when there's traffic!" she says, exasperated.

The way to accomplish this seeming utopia of massive public transportation in a country where budgets are scarce, bureaucracy is booming, and driving everywhere (albeit badly) is a national pastime, is to apply public pressure on the cabinet, "which all boils down to the treasury, in the end" admits Berkovitch.

One method of applying pressure is by petitioning. Each women's organization is soon to begin gathering as many signatures as possible - from its own members and from the general public - with which to try and push the government into action.

All women are welcome to express their solidarity by "hopping aboard" the women's train (stops ioclude: Beit Galim. Binyamina, Herzliya, Hadera, Netanya). Men are welcome to join in petition-signing and other pressure tactics.

Money-back guarantees catching on in American health-care industry

THEY may be the six most repeated words in business: Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back. If the toaster doesn't toast, the dress looks awful, or the new car is a lemon, most consumers don't hesitate to stomp back to the store and demand a refund. But would you demand your money back if your health care didn't measure up to what you wanted or expect-

In what some in the US medical establisbment see as one of the most distasteful repercussions of medicine's transformation into a bona-fide business, some health-care professionals are beginning to support the idea of the money-back guarantee.

The concept, some critics charge, strikes at the heart of the traditional doctor-parient relationship, which is based on the patient's trust that the doctor will do his or her best and the rest is left to fate, Proponents of the money-back fee structures, however, question the sacred concept that the doctor gets paid no matter what happens.

The controversy of contingency fees in medicine began last year when one of the US's top infertility clinics, Pacific Fertility Medical Center, began offering some patients a partial refund if they didn't get pregnant. That controversial program has spread to at least five infertility clinics across the US. Some prology clinics are offering refunds to men who undergo vasectomy reversals if the surgery isn't successful, including one doctor's office in. Shiseido's, but which makes for ... Houston that advertises its refund offer on a Region is offering a refund of up to $25 of the co-payment if members aren't satisfied with their doctor's visit. And Blue Shield of Northern California, several years ago, dipped a cautious toe into this puddle by offering, in a few cases, to pay for a patient's treatment with an experimental therapy that was oot approved for insurance reimbursement provided that tho treatment was successful. Blue Shield no longer offers that option, and a representative says the company now views contingency fees based oo outcome as "a bad

Refund offers, or payment made contingent on the outcome, should have a role albeit a limited one - in medicine, argues Dr. Geoffrey Sher, who pioneered the refund program at Pacific Fertility Center, where he is executive director. "Outcomebased pricing makes in-vitro fertilization more accessible to more people [who doo't have insurance]," Sher says. "The vast majority of people don't have access to IVF because they can't afford it."

Pees contingent on outcome are particularly suited to the infertility field, he says, because it is obvious whether the treatment is successful. "I am against outcome-based contingency fees in medicine where you cannot guarantee outcome," Sher says. "But there is oo field in medicine where the outcome is so elear-cut as ours. The end point is so measurable. You're pregnant or you're not. I'm not saying this belongs in every Instead of suffering, the doctor-patient relationship should be enhanced by risksharing fee structures, be suggests. "Nobody would argue that perception of caring is as important as the quality of care. But don't you feel better if you get all the TLC and yet are assured that you are coming to a place where it's cost-effective? It's like getting a warranty on a product you

Critics, however, view the trend as overthe-top commercialism. In June, the American Medical Association reiterated its objection to contingency fees because of the growing popularity of the concept in the infertility field. The AMA statement explained that a doctor's fee should be based on the "value" of the service, not the outcome.

Doctors do the very best they can, and what happens after that is beyond their control," says Dr. Robert M. Tenery Jr., a Dallas ophthalmologist and member of the AMA's council on ethics and judicial affairs. Contingency-fee plans "change medicine from a bond between the doctor and patient to some sort of business transaction. That is not what we want the relationship to be," he them uncomfortable. "I hope this doesn't spread," says Dr. Drew Altman, president of the Kaiser Family Foundation, a non-profit national health-care philanthropy based in Menlo Park, California. "I mean, what are we going to do next, offer consumers a set of free steak knives or pots and pans for their business? Medical professionals cannot guarantee outcomes if they are dealing honestly with all comers. I'm very much afraid of this. It seems to me the kind of verse incentives." Nevertheless, Altman doesn't rule out its application in certain settings. "On the edges there might be some instances where this might work," he says. "The problem is when you get into the complex areas of medicine where there is great uncertainty and a lot of gray area. Financial incentives just don't work very well."

Indeed, if doctors and health-insurance administrators are serious about providing quality health care, then they should be amenable to the idea of providing a refund for not meeting expectations, says medical ethicist David Thomasma of Loyola University in Chicago. The concept is par-Other observers say the concept makes ticularly warranted in the areas of health care that are typically not covered by insurance, he says. For example, consumers who are unhappy with the results of cosmetic surgery, or who don't lose weight when following a weight-loss program according to instructions, should get their money back, he says. The program could also apply to areas where the result is clearly measurable. Is the pain gone after the cavity is filled? Is vision better after cataract surgery or radial keratotomy?

"I think we ought to be able to distinguish the types of treatment that are amenable to a refund," says Thomasma, a member of Pacific Fertility Medical Center's ethics board. "Of course, we should be cautious about cotrepreneurism in medicine. But there are treatments which are not about disease where the outcome is measurable or achievable. And if you can't meet that, you refund. We should oot do a blanket condemnation of risk-sharing or guaranteeing outcomes but be more specific about areas where it would be possible."

The advantage to consumers is that, should the concept become embraced in such fields, the clinics or doctors who are poor performers will not survive.

A good start

fter absorbing criticism over a seeming lack of policy resolve for the past half-Year. Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's administration has finally unveiled a policy initiative worthy of praise. The Treasury's long-awaited blueprint for accelerated deregulation and structural economic reforms, approved by the government yesterday, is well-planned, wide-ranging and ambitious in its aims. There is a very large distance between proposing reforms and actually implementing them, and the government still faces a difficult test in seeing its plans come to fruition. But if it succeeds, this government will be able to take credit for pointing the Israeli economy in the direction of greater prosperity and higher living standards.

In truth there is not much of an alternative. There can be no doubt that in an increasingly competitive international economic environment countries which do not work towards fashioning a more efficient public sector will in the end pay a high price.

Equally important are demonopolizing and privatizing initiatives. There is no need to point out what is obvious to everyone - prices of just about anything in Israel are higher than they are abroad. This is the result of a combination of a badly conceived taxation system and a proliferation of strong monopolies. Tax reforms have yet to be proposed, but yesterday's reform initiative includes some bold plans for eliminating monopolies in public transportation, privatizing water supply management, adding a third cellular telephone provider and increasing the number of petrol stations. Anyone who doubts the effects these reforms can have on the prices consumers pay for goods and services need only compare the average price of a cellular telephone prior to the elimination of Pelephone's monopoly with the price today.

To its credit the government also made an effort to present its economic reform plan in a positive manner. Netanyahu opened the discussion on the initiative by announcing that he will ask the Knesset Finance Committee to cancel a scheduled 6.9% rise to the salaries of MKs and ministers. Finance Minister Dan Meridor added that even if the pay hike was not cancelled, he would attempt to forgo the increase in his own salary. Such personal examples set by public figures are important at a time when the government is asking the public to contend with a reduced government budget and structural changes which may be painful for many in the short-run.

Meridor's decisioo to meet with Histadrut Chairman MK Amir Peretz and inform him of the plans was another wise move. Peretz himself made a positive if cautious statement following the meeting in which he welcomed the government's efforts to engage in dialogue with the labor federation. Correcting inefficiencies in the economy does not necessarily have to cause confrontation, if all concerned parties make a sincere effort to balance individual needs with the public's best interests. Government, industry and labor successfully worked together for everyone's benefit in fashioning the economic reforms of 1985. That agreement was reached when the economy was on the verge of collapse. It would be a sad commentary on Israeli society if only the most serious of looming threats can force such beneficial cooperation.

Nevertheless, strong opposition to the government's proposals are expected. Spokesmen for the Egged bus cooperative, for example, were quick to issue a statement claiming that increasing competition in public transport would lead to higher prices and poorer service, in an attempt to frighten the public. A number of entrenched monopolies, such as Agrexco (export), Maman (airport baggage handling and inspection), the Employment Service, and the Standards Institute will surely fight the proposed reforms.

These negative reactions should not deter the government. Due consideration to individual hardships must be given where it is justified and dialogue should always be maintained, but the government must show resolve in progressing toward the goals it has set for increasing the public's welfare. If anything, yesterday's proposals did not go far enough; no mentioo has been made of some major monopolies, such as the banks, the Israel Electric Corporation and the Israel Lands Administration. In fairness this government still has nearly four years in which to deal with these issues.

Finally, some consideration must be given to the question of how the proposed privatization of government-owned corporations should be implemented. It is doubtful that one approach can work for all government companies, but in many cases, selling shares to the public is a good approach. This prevents the ownership of major industries from being concentrated in the hands of powerful individuals, enables the public to share in future profits and also gives a wide range of people a stake in the efficient functioning of the economy.

The government's initiative comes at a good time for such public sales - shares on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange have risen sharply in the past two months. Renewed public confidence in the bourse, coupled with economic reforms and public offerings of government companies, could be just what is needed to give the economy a strong boost.

newspapers that "these were acts carried out by the Israeli intelligence services," it didn't take him long to see how he could make the most of the situation. HERE WE come to the heart of the matter. British as well as Israeli intelligence sources have oo doubt whatsoever that Assad knows full well that oeither Israel nor Turkey was responsible for the bomb blast in his capital.

The sly fox Assad is well aware that Iraq's dictator (whom he calls "the snake Saddam Hussein") is almost certainly the mastermind behind efforts to topple the Syrian

The State Department also suspects that neither the Turks nor the Israelis are to blame; its official reaccion to the blast was to declare that it needed proof before issuing any condemnation.

Saddam Hussein, anxious to persuade the UN that he is as pure as the driven snow in a bid to get the world community to lift sanctions against selling his oil, has been keeping a low profile during the past five years.

Now that this has been partially achieved, he is beginning to flex his muscles again - but slyly, like a snake, since he wants to avoid new charges of breaking agreements he signed after his defeat in the Gulf war.

According to Western intelligence sources there is growing evidence that Saddam wants revenge against his arcb-enemy Assad, who joined the Americans and other UN nations like Britain and France in forcing him to withdraw from Kuwait and back off from his long-term plan to conquer Saudi Arabia.
This week Saddam Hussein sig-

Nobody is more aware of Saddam's muscle-flexing than the US, which believes his to have been the mind behind the bombing of US army barracks in Daharan in Saudi Arabia last June.

The enmity between the two dictators is fierce. Assad allied himself with Iran during Teheran's war with Iraq.

YOSEF GOELL

N Tuesday two separate panels of the High Court of Justice rejected two applications for injunctions mvolving limits on the freedom of speech.

A three-justice panel headed by Chief Justice Aharon Barak turned down an application to order the attorney-general to show cause why he had not pressed criminal charges against haredi Jerusalem Deputy Mayor Haim Miller. Miller had declared publicly that the Israeli flag was "nothing more than a stick with a blue-and-white rag tied to it."

In a separate ruling, Justice Theodor Orr refused to issue a temporary injunction forbidding the broadcasting of the Cameri Quintet's satire skits on TV's Channel 1.

What the two cases have in common is the question of red lines in a free society.

The High Court rollings were both correct and consistent in finding that though Miller and the Quintet had deeply offended various sectors of the public, the court was not the place to decide to shut them up.

It is vital, however, that those rulings not be interpreted to mean that "anything goes," that there should be no red lines in public discourse.

Though Miller offended many Israelis, secular and observant, be shouldn't be hauled before a court; as a political figure, ideally his punishment should be politi-

But let's not imagine for a momeot that the supposedly "proud and patriotic Zionist," Mayor Olmert, would dream of undermining his municipal coali-tion with Miller's haredim by sacking his deputy.

Io a half-bearted apology, Miller feared his words could be used to excuse "retribution" against his haredi constituency.

There are limits on the freedom of speech - but the court isn't the place. to set them'

Offensive statements by Miller and his ilk should be piled up as "ammunition" for an eventual confrontation with the haredi establishment.

WITH Cameri Quinter, the red lines must be drawn within the Broadcasting Authority, a body that has been derelict in its duties. Satire, by definition, is poking fun, and that is understandably offensive to those on the receiving end - governments and assorted power-wielders.

But satire's license should not be extended to include deriding worshipers at prayer, for example, or gutter humor and sexual innuendo clearly meant to offend square" sensibilities.

The fact that the actors and writers of the Quintet feel constrained to wallow in the gutter and indulge in tittering highschool sexual humor is a sorry indication of the seeming limits to their talent.

There are public supervisory bodies for public radio and TV. Unpopular — and obvious — as it may sound, the members of those bodies need reminding that part of their job is to be a censor serving the public interest.

And it is part of an editor's joh to be a censor, too.

How ironic that the same people who demanded that President Weizman be made to shut up following his recent injudicious comments about homosexuals have been the ones to demand total freedom for "artists" to deride other groups like war widows and bereaved parents.

Public broadcasting today finds itself under concerted attack from the Prime Minister's Office though to his credit. Finance Minister Dan Meridor this week came out against Netanyahu's demand that the public broadcasting channels be privatized.

In such an atmosphere the surporters of public broadcasting need every ally they can muster. No society can survive without setting boundaries on the exercise of free speech.

It is not the place of the court to set those limits, but that of public bodies guided by a sense of the public's benefit, and its slowly changing perception of what constitutes the limits of good taste.

LEADERSHIP QUALITIES

Sir. - Amotz Asa-El (January 3)

clearly shows how the leadership of the National Religious Party metamorphosed from multicultural recaissance men such as Burg, Warhaftig and Raphael, to the present more parochial Hammer and Levy. But to maintain perspective. Asa-El should not have limited his analysis to the NRP. In the Labor movement. for example, can the narrowly political beings of the present generation - such as Barak. Ramon and Baram - be compared, in any way, to multicultural giants such as Katznelson, Sprinzak, Ben-Gurion and Arlosoroff? The NRP has evolved, but retains the same general goals, only the means have changed as the result of changed leadership. Labor, on the other hand, is so radically altered that one can even quescon the cononued use of the party name.

But all this may be irrelevant and we may be in need of the type of leadership embodied in Golda Meir. Regardless of whether one agreed with her or oot, Mrs. Meir, unfamiliar with broad world culture, had several characteristics that made her an authentic. accepted and effective leader. She had a strong sense of history; she felt herself to be a servant of the Jewish people; she had little doubt of the justice of the cause that she served; and she had good common sense. Dear Ruthie,

I suspect that my husband is involved in something under-handed where finances are concerned. Either that, or some-thing worse. Since he denies that anything is wrong whenever I raise the subject, I'm considering hiring a private detective in order to save our marriage or dissolve it. But, hiring a detective is very costly, so I would have to end up being equally underhanded about money. I just don't know what to do.

Similarly, if a detective is needed to prove your fears baseless. your marriage is equally on its way up the proverbial creek - or on its way down a slippery

It went on to advertise a six-week workshop that would, among other things, teach participants to use "dream energy" to solve problems, unleash creativity, and conquer According to the Complete Oxford

English Dictionary, to dream is "to have visions and imaginary sense impressions in sleep." But to the flier's author, selfmade dream expert and social worker Tzippi Moss, dreams are much more than that. "There is an ancient notion, found also in Judaism, that our soul leaves the body while we're sleeping and that dreams are the sonl's adventures or rendezvous with God or with spirits," says Moss. Indeed, in her workshop, she claims that "a dream can be God talking

Some experts say dreams are just the brain's way of downloading all the input that comes in to us during the day and have no deeper meaning. "But," says Moss, who has read widely on the subject and has taught dream-work to adults, classroom teachers and children, including a course at Ofek, Jernsalem's enrichment program for gifted pupils, "more and more people are seeing dreams as a combination of the brain sorting through and making sense of information, and as having real meaning that can help us in our lives.

"When we dream, we are creating masterpieces every single night. All of us - the postman, the garbage collector, your hair-dresser, the neighbor that you can't stand have found myself awe-struck by the beauty in people's dreams. Whether you call it God's way of talking through us or our own inner wisdom and creativity, it's clear that we all have powerful potential that we are not tapping into during our

"Dreams come to teach us about ourselves, to open up new possibilities. They help us become aware of issues we might not have wanted to face, they help us know ourselves better."

Moss's workshop is designed to teach people to do just that. Six participants are gathered around a table on a cool night, ready to find out what can be learned from dreams. Initially, there is a warning to never analyze or interpret someone else's dream. Any interpretation, says Moss, may have more to do with us than with the dreamer. Instead, we listen, while keeping our own ideas on hold. There are many ways to tease out the secret messages dreams have for us. One member of the group shares a dream she had and the rest

Then each person takes turns responding as if it were their own dream. In this way the dreamer gets access to ideas and responses she may not have had but that may ring true to her.

ON ANOTHER occasion, Moss uses the "Martian" approach. "Let's pretend I'm from Mars and don't know anything about life on earth," she says. One workshop participant then tells about a recurring dream she had as a child: "I am crossing i street and a car comes zooming toward me. I need to decide whether I will keep going across, or turn back. Sometimes in the dream, I decide to keep going but then a force pulls me backward. If I decide to go back, the force pulls me forward. Either way, I end up oo my hands and knees desperately trying to make it to the other side while the car gets closer and Pretending to be an naive extra-terrestri-al, Moss asks, "What's a street? What's a car?" Sometimes your answers may provide you with a clue you might oot have thought of otherwise." What's the force?"

"Something sinister beyond my cootrol pulling me toward disaster," says the dreamer. As always, Moss asks "What feelings are you aware of in the dream?" Panic, the dreamer says. "With recurring dreams, you need to ask, when did they hegin? When did they eod?" advises Moss. She then asks if her answers remind the dreamer of anything that was going on at the time. "It was during the Sinai campaign," she says. "We were living on a kibbutz in the south and we were being shelled." For the first time she makes a connection between this mysterious, recurring dream and the frightening reality that was around her.

Another way to work with a dream is to diagram it. One way to do this is to make two columns: one for all major actions, and another for associated feelings. Often, the feelings that emerge can be clues about in the dreamer's life, says Moss. "Dreams often allow us to have feelings that we repress in our waking life," says Moss. "If you're lucky enough to remember the dream, it can allow you to bring an awareness of a situation more into consciousness." Moss gives an example of a dream she had while she and her family were spending several years back in the US and were struggling with the decisioo of whether or not to return to Israel. (She hails from Milwaukee and lived in Minnesota.) "I bad a very powerful dream in which I'm in a house, but I'm oot sure whether it is in Israel or the US. The dream was telling me, 'You're oot sure where your home is.' It showed me my conflict in an image. I hadn't been that aware of how difficult this issue was for

Moss says some dream groups work out better than others, depending largely on participants' willingness to open up. What I got out of Tzippi's workshop, says one participant, "was the notion that I should pay attention to and think shout my dreams because they might contain messages for my life.

The other night I dreamt that a friend looked into my shirt pocket and saw a bundle of cash. She said, 'You're rich!' 1 replied, sarcasocally, 'Oh, yeah, I have 150 shekels.' She looked me in the eyes and said, 'Some people only have four shekels.' When I woke up, I realized that what this person said in the dream was very relevant to my life. My kids drive me it would be. I have a huge overdraft. The dream was reminding me to focus on the positive, to couot my blessings, to take a secood look at all the wonderful things in my life that I take for granted. It was a reminder I needed." Another participant found the workshop experience frustrating. "I felt we spent more time telling our dreams than working on them," she said. "And I wasn't willing to open up and get personal with people I'd only be with for six weeks." But several of those who have attended Moss's workshops have gone on to form their own ioformal dream groups.

Moss has a dream of her own: to create a "dreaming for peace" group that would be made up of Arabs and Jews, settlers and leftists, religious and secular, immigrants and natives. "Bringing together people of very different cultural, political, and reli-gious orientations to share their dreams can foster tremendous understanding and respect," Moss says. She sees such a group as her personal contribution to the peace

Robert Daniell, liberator of Belsen, dies at 95

OBERT Daniell, the British tank commander British tank community gates of the Belsen concentration camp in 1945, has died, Daniell was the first Allied witness to the horrors of Belsen. He was a lieutenant colonel in the 10th Hussars, who were operating in northwest Germany in April 1945. The column was nearing a German camp when an enemy major ran towards it. "I thought that was odd because you never saw a hospital. It was crammed with German officer with his coat flapping," Daniell recalled in an ioterview with The Associated Press in 1992. "He said we shouldn't go oo because there was disease ahead, typhoid. Tanks oever took prisooers so we waved him behind us."

Ordered to eheck oot the camp, Daniell crashed his tank through the gates, and encountered no resistance from guards. "I saw a man go to a door of a building and lock it. I shot the lock off and found it was the tiers of hunks on which lay starving, sick and helpless people. Those in the bottom tiers had drowned in urine and excremeot coming down from those at

"There were Hitler Youth shooting prisoners so they would die in agony, the meo in the groin and the women up the hackside. I was so disgusted I shot the guards with the last four rounds I had. They were the scum of the earth, horrible." Daniell's unit did not linger at the camp, which still held more than 60,000 prisoners when it was officially liberated three days later. Most were in critical condition, and there were 10,000 more rotting corpses on the ground and in the harracks.

Zim's Morgenstern resigns following $2.1m. losses

GALIT LIPKIS BECK

MATTY Morgenstern, general manager of Zim Israel Navigation Company, yesterday announced his resignation, several months after the company's performance started to deteriorate

Zim is one of the largest container shipping companies in the world, offering transportation services along most major international trading routes. The company is controlled by the government and the Israel Corp., which each have a 48.6 percent holding. The remaining shares are held by private investors.

Sources close to the company said Morgenstern, who has held the position for 12 years, was forced to resign in reaction to pressure from Shoul Eisenberg, chairman of the Israel Corp. The Israel Corp. intends to implement major structural and managerial changes in Zim, It is anticipated that Eisenberg will become more involved in the management of the company in future.

Zim completed the first nine months of the year with losses of more than $2.1 million, mainly because of the worldwide crisis in the shipping field. As a result, the owners plans to float the company on local and overseas stock exchanges have been repeatedly put off in the last two years and attempts to find a strategic international partner have failed.

Morgenstern was unavailable for comment yesterday.

A company spokesperson said the manager, who joined Zim 46 years ago, informed the Israel Corp. of his intentions to resign already in 1996 but at the request of the owners he postponed his resignatioo. The spokesperson emphasized Morgenstern was not forced to resign.

Zim's board of directors is expected to convene today to discuss the structural changes and appointment of a new manager. At the meeting, Morgenstern is expected to express his dissatisfaction with the way his planned resignation was leaked to the press.

Cabinet approves most structural reforms

THE cabinet yesterday unanimously approved the vast majority of the Treasury blueprint for structural reforms in the public sector. Eighteen recommendations were accepted of the 25 formulated by the budget department over the last year. The remaining measures will be discussed at Friday's regular cabinet meet-

Among the proposals approved were:

Opening public transportation to competition, which according to Finance Minister Dan Meridor would lead to cheaper fares. The tenders for three major intercity routes will be advertised no later than the end of July. Routes to and within Modi in also will be subject to tender and awarded to the cheapest operator.

 The establishment of a public committee to examine the possibility of raising retirement ages for men and women. Finance Ministry spokesman Eli Yosef denied media reports yesterday that the cabinet was to consider increasing retirement ages for women to 65 and men to 70. Any recommendation will only be made hy the committee set up to examine the issue.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Sweden's Trade Minister Bjorn Von Sydow will lead a 25member trade delegation to Israel next week.

The five-day visit, at the invitation of Industry and Trade Minister

Natan Sharansky, will include meetings with Sharansky, Tourism Minister Moshe Katsav and Bank of Israel Governor Jacob Frenkel. The delegation, which includes leading businesspeople, also will attend seminars on the local economy, cooperation within the Middle East, local high-tech industries and scientific and technological research. Sydow will visit the technological incubator at Ness Ziona, meet representatives of the Israel Export Institute, Manufacturers Association and Chambers of Trade Federation. The minister also will spend a day in the Palestinian-controlled areas.

Israell exports to Sweden reached $87.5 million in 1995, with $386m. of imports. In the first nine months last year, exports were up 10 percent and imports 11% compared to the same period in 1995. During 1996, Swedish companies such as Volvo, SAS and Telia invested in Israel for the first time.

"Netanyahu's statements are a true picture of the disaster the peace process is going through. The man hates the Oslo agreement ... It is not that Netanyahu has difficulties inside his government [on guaranteeing deployment dates]. He himself hates the agreement more than any other minister. His excuses are the biggest deceit." The statements which angered Arafat concerned Netanyahu's claim in a talk to Israel Bonds activists Tuesday night that the Oslo agreement "is a bad agreement... negotiated without due attention to military and security

THE Ethiopian runners collected the honors at the 20th Tiberias Marathon yesterday but the real drama of the day was provided by the local women athletes.

Two hundred yards before the finishing line, 25-year-old Ella Krimus, the second placed woman behind Alemitu Bekele from Ethiopia, collapsed and was helped to her feet by a bystander along the route. Disoriented and confused, Krimus summoned up what strength she could and managed to reach the line, where she immediately received medical attendon. Her ome was 2:53:00. twelve seconds behind Bekele.

The controversy erupted when Ilya Bar-Zeev, the coach of thirdplaced Nili Ahramski, sought Krimus's disqualification on the grounds that she had accepted help. Legally, no runner may be touched during the race.

Krimus responded that she had not been aware of the help proffered to her and that she had finished the race alone. Her pleas were refuted by two sittings of the appeals committee which included a viewing of the video.

In announcing the disqualifica-tioo, Professor Uri Goldbourt, head of the committee, said, "We saw in the video that she was supported, helped to the ground and then raised again. If she had not been helped, she wouldn't have got up again. Following the decision, Abramski, with a time of 2:53:27, moved into second place and first among the local women, with Idit Ganot Keren-Zvi second.

At the stormy press conference after the race, Krimus accused the organizers of discrimination against her as an immigrant from Russia, "I feel the difference in treatment to Israeli and iminigrant runners, it's not fair," said Krimus,

"I finished the race alone." The men's race, in comparison,

ATLANTA (AP) - Henry James hit a 3-pointer with one second left in overtime Tuesday night to give the Atlanta Hawks their 12th straight home victory, 105-103 over the Phoenix Suns.

For most of the night, the Hawks relied on their other two frontcourt players. Christian Laettner and Dikembe Mutombo. Laettner scored 30 points, including a 3-pointer with 24.2 seconds left in regulation which sent the game to overtime, and Mutombo had 22 points and 21 rebounds.

The lead changed hands five omes in the final 1:0g of the extra period, capped off by James's shot from the top of the 3-point arc with Kevin Johnson right in his face. James, who has played with five other NBA teams, began this season with the Sioux Falls Sky Force of .. the Continental

Only a 30-point fourth quarter allowed Dallas to avoid flirting with the lowest point total in NBA history. The Mavericks seemed to be on pace to break the franchise low of 68, but backup center Greg Dreiling had a putback and the third 3-pointer of his 10-year career in the final 32 secoods.

Low points included a ninepoint first quarter in which the Mavericks missed their final 17 shots, a 19-point second quarter in which they fell behind by 30 points and a third quarter in which the deficit reached 41.

John Starks led the Knicks with 21 points. Patrick Ewing had 1g points, 10 rebounds and seven blocks in 29 minutes for New York, which played without starters Chris Childs (back spasms) and Larry Johnson (ham-

NEWCASTLE (AP) - Kevin Keegan, who transformed Newcastle from a struggling lower division side to Premier League giant, resigned as manager yesterday in a move that shocked the English soccer

Keegan, who had been in charge at Newcastle since 1992 and was considered a "messiah" by the team's supporters, stepped down in mid-season with the Magpies in fourth place - five points behind leagueleading Liverpool.

"This is a black day for Newcastle," said the city's Lord Mayor, Les Russell.

No specific reason was given for Keegan's departure, which had been rumored for weeks but still came as a buge surprise since the club is still in contention for league, Cup and European honors.

"It was my decision and my decision alone," the 45-year-old Keegan said. "I offered my resignation at the end of last season but was persuaded by the board to stay. I feel I bave taken the club as far as I can and that it would be in the best interests of all concerned

The club said Keegan told the board be no longer wanted to stay in soccer management.

Following lengthy discussions at which the board tried to persuade Kevin to change his mind, both parties agreed that the best route forward was for the club to reluctantly accept his resignation with immediate effect," the statement said.

Keegan's assistant Terry McDermott and coach Arthur Cox assumed temporary control of team affairs.

"I am stunned - probably shocked is the right word," McDermott said. "The players are very sad because he was a very well-respected person both on and off the field. The lads loved playing for him."

Former Liverpool manager Kenny Dalglish, who resigned as manager of Blackburn after winning the title in 1995, was listed by British bookmakers as 4-5 favorite to replace Keegan. Other possible candidates included McDermott, Deportivo la Coruna manager John Toshack, Aston Villa manager Brian Little, former Barcelona manager Johann Cruyff and Inter Milan boss Roy Hodgson. Newcastle director Douglas Hall paid tribute to Keegan in a separate statement.

"Kevin took over at the helm of a club destined for the Second Division and scaled the heights of the Premier League with a style of football never before seen at St. James Park," he said. "Kevin leaves the club in a far stronger position than when he arrived and the squad of players he has built up is one of the strongest in Europe. The reasons for Keegan's resignation were clouded

"I wouldn't have a clue," former England teammate Ray Wilkins said. "He's assembled a side capable of winning things in Europe, of possibly winning the league championship or Cup in England. Only Kevin would know the reasons why."

There was speculation that Keegan couldn't cope with the pressure from the fans and media. Despite Newcastle's success under Keegan, the team has failed to win any trophies and the manager has been criticized for the club's poor defensive record.

Hundreds of stunned Newcastle fans, many of them in tears, gathered outside the club's ground at St. James's Park after learning of Keegan's departure.

Keegan stuns Newcastle Hobbled Maccabi hopes to with shock resignation overcome Alba, Alexis

IT'S reunion time tonight when Maccabi Tel Aviv returns to Euroleague action, opening the second swiog of play against Germany's Alba Berlin, where they will be up against former Maccabi player Wendell Alexis.

Alexis, who played for Maccabi two years ago, is now the star of an Alba club that has been simply ootstanding in German league play, going 18-0 so far. The former Syracuse University star is an allaround player, mixing fine defense with smooth moves to the boop, and has become a fan favorite in Berlin, where Alba olays before sell-out crowds in a brand new arena.

Alexis isn't the only threat Maccabi must face tonight: Veteran point guard Sasha Obradovic bas been through the European basketball wars, and is likely to be heavily relied upon by Alba's outstanding coach Svatislav Passic. Obradovic is as much a threat to score as he is to make a fine pass, and is known as a tough defender.

Shooting guard Henrik Rudl will also have to be closely watched. Rudl, who handles the ball well

exceedingly hard to the boop, but can also shoot well from beyond the three-point stripe. A fan favorite, he's likely to see a great deal of either Derrick Sharp or Borko Radovic in an attempt to keep him out of the offense. Maccabi would do well to foul

Alba's center Sasha Hoffmann, who does a fairly good Shaquille O'Neal imitation from the line. Hoffmann's a very physical player, but Buck Johnson or Randy White should be able to slip past him inside. As for Alexis, be's bound to be out for a bit of revenge against Maccabi, which let him go even though he played fairly well for them. Alba is known for trying to play an up-tempo game, so Maccabi oeeds to cootrol the rebounds to prevent that from occurring. As for Coach Zvi Scherf's club, its return to Euroleague play comes at a time when the club is not at its healthiest. The most serious problem is with Brad Leaf, who is nursing an injury and will miss tonight's game. Johnson is recovering from an illness and arrived in Berlin a day after his teammates. Constantin Pope has also been sick, meaning Maccabi is at less than full strength as it begins the next stage of Euroleague play in a Group E that includes two of the clubs it has already faced -Stefanel Milan and CSKA Moscow - and three it hasn't Alba, Greece's Olympiakos, and Belginm's Charleroi, the latter expected to be the Group E doormats. Oded Katash needs to rediscover his European sbooting eye, while Randy White tries to show Maccabi fans why he was recently selected to a European all-star team. Popa is looking to continue where he left off after his outstanding showing vs. Ulker, while Sharp and Radovic aim to add to their recent outstanding minutes in-practice games the club played during the break. If they do, Maccabi can look forward to drawing first blood in what should be increasingly tough Euroleague

The game will be shown live on Channel 1 at 9:15 pm.

NBA lists top 10 teams of all time

NEW YORK (Reuter) - Two editions of the Boston Celocs, Chicago Bulls, Los Angeles Lakers and Philadelphia 76ers are among the top 10 teams in NBA history, according to a list compiled for the "NBA at 50" anniversary celebration.

The teams were selected in balloting among media members that regularly cover the league. Voters were asked to select their top 10 teams without ranking them.

The 1964-65 and 1985-86 Celtics, the 1991-92 and 1995-96 Bulls, the 1966-67 and 1982-83 Sixers and the 1971-72 and 1986-87 Lakers qualified for the list, as did the 1969-70 New York Knicks and the 1988-89 Detroit Pistons.

Bill Russell. Sam Jones and John Havlicek led the first of the Boston teams, which won an epic East Finals from the Sixers on the way to the NBA title. The deciding seventh game produced the famed "Havlicek stole the ball!" call by Johnny Most.

Larry Bird led the 1986 team that defeated Houston in the NBA Finals.

Michael Jordan dominated both of the Chicago teams on the list, including last season's 1995-96 team that won an NBA-record 72 regular season games.

Jerry West, Wilt Chamberlain and Gail Goodrich led the 1971-72 Lakers team that won a record 33 consecutive regular season games and had the best road winning percentage in NBA history

Fifteen years later, Magic Johnson sparked the "Showtime" edition of the Lakers that beat Boston in the NBA Finals.

The 1966-67 Sixers, behind Chamberlain, started the season 46-4 and defeated the San Francisco Warriors in the NRA Finals. The next NBA title for the franchise was by the 1982-83 team led by Julius Erving and Moses Maione. The 1969-70 Knicks were considered among the best passing teams in NBA history and defeated the Lakers in the Finals behind Walt Frazier and an inspired performance by injured center Willis Reed, who hobbled on to the court before Game Seven and scored the first two baskets.

Jordanians protest Israeli trade fair in Amman

AMMAN (AP) - Security forces Amman since the 1990-91 Gulf on horses and camels blocked more than 4,000 angry protesters yesterday from disrupting the opening of the first Israeli trade

The protesters, chanting "Allahu akbar," or "God is great," tried to push through police six deep about a kilometer from the fair site, but could not get nearer. Police firing water cannons failed to disperse the crowd.

After six hours of noisy but peaceful protest, the participants dispersed quietly, saying labor and trade unions would hold a threeday strike against the fair. It opened vesterday despite the demonstration, though it began three hours behind schedule.

The crowd carried banners reading "Jordan is not the Zionist bridge to the Arab world" and "A massacre in Hebron and an exhibition in Amman," referring to Pvt. Noam Friedman's shooting spree in Hebron last week.

There were no reports of injuries and arrests in Tuesday's protest on the outskirts of Amman, It devel-oped into a standoff between the demonstrators and about 1,000 police, some on horses and camels and others leading dogs. Many of the police were armed with assault nifles and clubs. We reject dealing with the Zionist enemy in view of its aggression on Arab countries." said Khalil Haddadin, a member of Parliament representing the Jordanian branch of the Arab Baath Socialist Party, the ruling party in both Syria and Iraq. The protest - the largest in war - underlines growing opposition to normalizing ties with Israel while Israeli-Palestinian peace talks remain stalled.

Efforts to cancel the trade fair have been led by Islamic fundamentalists. But lack of progress in the Middle East peace process also drew many members of centrisi political parties.

Representatives of 20 of the 23 recognized political parties were taking part in the protest. The demonstrators included legislators, trade union activists and members of women's federations Islamic fundamentalist

At the blue hangar where the fair is being held, fair officials and representatives of Israeli companies could be seen watching the demonstration. About 200 Israeli companies had been expected to take part, but only 70 sent exhibits, apparently because of efforts to stop the fair.

Police had blocked off all streets leading to the fair, meaning many invited guests were unable to reach the exhibition hangar, which is painted inside with the blue and white colors of the Israeli flag. Aran Ayyash, an interior decora-

Ben Yair: I resigned over lack of trust EVELYN GORDON

THE cabinet is to choose a new attorney-general tomorrow, outgoing Auomey-General Michael Ben-Yair said yesterday at a parting press conference. The attorney-general took the opportunity to express his opinion on several issues on the public

Ben-Yair strongly supported abolishing procedural immunity for MKs, and praised Knesset Speaker Dan Tichon's decision to set up a public commission to study the issue.

Procedural immunity, which was established in 1951 to prevent the government from harassing opposition MKs via the legal system, was understandable in the context of its time, he said, as no manpower and equipment, be one yet knew how the legal system would turn out. "But there has never been a case which justified this fear. Therefore, there is no reason to continue this procedural immunity," he continued, noting that it has also increasingly been abused by MKs who use the Knesset to escape prosecution. "And one of the most important foundations of the rule of law... is the principle of equality: That everyone is equal before the law." Ben-Yair said one of the weakest points of the law enforcement system is police investigations. In recent years, the police bave been diverting more and more funds to security at the expense of investigations, and the result is an outdated, slow system with inadequate

Ben-Yair also said he thought the investigation of accidental deaths in the army should be removed from the IDF's bands. The investigation of both training accidents and operational accidents should be given to an external body," he said - not because of a lack of faith in the army, but on the general principle that no body should investigate should not be done, and I'm glad the government didn't do it...[but it created] an ongoing feeling of alienation and lack of trust," be

"When we're talking about such an important position, I thought it would be irresponsible of me to continue to serve when there was such a feeling." While the attor-ney-general's first loyalty must be to the public, he explained, it is also important that he enjoy the trust of the cabinet.

Finally, Ben-Yair said he had recommended setting up a public commission to look into the entire issue of the attorney-general's sta-us. However, he said, he personally opposed proposals to detach the role of head of the prosecution from the attorney-general's job, saying this would weaken the

El Al employee returns envelope with $30,000 to bride-to-be

PLANNING a wedding can mean keeping track of an over-whelming number of details, and a woman flying recently from New York to Tel Aviv for her wedding lost track of 30,000

The bride to be left an envelope containing $30,000 in cash on the airplane. Thanks to the honesty of El Al employee Etti Asraf, however, she still has the money to pay for her wedding. Asraf found the large envelope while cleaning out the airplane's cabin to prepare for the next flight. She took it to her supervisor, and the two of them were shocked to find it contained $30,000 in bundles of $5,000.

Just as they were reporting their discovery to El Al's office at Ben-Gurion Airport, the distraught woman came in to ask for help.

Asraf returned the envelope to her, and she polled several hun-dred dollars out to reward her. But Asraf refused the award, saying it was all in a day's work.

War on ideological crime marked Ben-Yair's tenure

ATTORNEY-GENERAL Michael Ben-Yair considered the war on ideological crime and his efforts to inculcate democratic culture in Israel to be major elements of his tenure. Lack of success in either endeavor could have dangerous consequences, he said.

[Democratic culture] means tolerance. It means a government that puts limits on itself. It means not infringing on minority rights. It means maintaining the independence of the judiciary, and it means maintaining the independence of the prosecution and the investigative authorities," he said. "I have the feeling that [these values] have not been sufficiently instilled in some sectors of the public."

Ideological crime is only the most glaring expression of this problem. The idea that a "political or ideological goal justifies bending and even breaking democratic rules" is very dangerous, he said, and this belief is not confined to a few individuals.

"Even if these trends [are found] in groups on the fringes, they do not just belong to a few individuals," he stated.

The battle against ideological crime has taken a number of forms, from the decision to outlaw Kach and Kahane Chai, to the indictment of Zo Artzenu for sedition, and to indictments for. incitement, but it cannot be waged solely by the legal system, he said. Everyone - politicians, edu-cators and religious leaders - must work to inculcate democratic values.

Administrative detentions are also part of the war on ideological crime, he added. "[We use these measures] when there is no evidence, or not enough evidence, for criminal proccedings, but there is a fear of future [violent] action, and it must be prevented," be said. While a democratic state "does not welcome administrative measures - not against Jews and not against non-Jews" - they are sometimes necessary to prevent a serious crime, be said.
